Every Roman was surrounded by slaves. The slave and his psychology flooded ancient Italy, and every Roman became inwardly, and of course unwittingly, a slave. Because living constantly in the atmosphere of slaves, he became infected through the unconscious with their psychology. No one can shield himself from such an influence (Contributions to Analytical Psychology, London, 1928).

that is to say, in this kind of world-city that I call the ultracity. This is an event that concerns us, a new kind of event. Hence the French exhibition title: Terre Natale, Ailleurs commence ici. "Ailleurs commence ici" [Elsewhere starts here] is not word play, but a play on meanings. When you say, "Ici commence ailleurs" [Here starts elsewhere], the logic is national, imperial and colonial. It's Rome. You are a Roman citizen right up to the ends of the Empire. Now, when you reverse the terms and say, "Ailleurs commence ici," you are saying that we are already elsewhere, with this mixing of populations and this end of national that we are seeing in Europe and elsewhere. In a sense, you can even say that the last borders are the shorelines. Those are the thresholds of the great continents. They are real borders, and Terre Natale, Ailleurs commence ici is the idea of a great mobilization, not a general one (remember that in the past general mobilization was war), but a global one. In a way, we are coming back to a word that has been forgotten or censored: deportation. I was a child during the Second World War and I can say that when the war was over, the thing that most shocked us all was the deportation. Not the Holocaust. The Holocaust was so monstrous that, in a way, we couldn't know about it. But de-

About 120 students and 35 mentors will gather in Rome over three days to focus on social inclusion, migrants and refugees, and interfaith dialogue.

Di Maio takes the floor after Salvini and before Renzi: the attitude is as institutional as that already shown in the last phase of the election campaign when in Rome, at the temple of Hadrian, before the vote, presented the team of 19 technicians who he would like to bring to the government of the country. On 5 March, the young leader of the Five Fists thanked the eleven million voters who "trusted the movement", the activists who financed the election campaign , and finally Beppe Grillo and Gianroberto Casaleggio, founders of the party.

ROME — Italian populists of all leanings took a hammer to their country's old political order in Sunday elections, crushing traditional centrist parties in favor of a kaleidoscope of alternatives on the left and right and upending their former system, according to preliminary results.

this strange prophecy: "Roman history, as it has appeared to us up till now, after having in part ordered our destiny, after having entered, in one form, into the composition of our social life, our customs, our opinions, our laws, comes now, in a different form, to order our new thoughts, those that must enter into the composition of our future social life."<sup>28</sup> In the workshops of Paris or

PAOLO VILLAGGIO

è nato a Genova il 31 dicembre 1938. Ha un fratello gemello professore ordinario di scienza delle costruzioni alla Scuola Normale di Pisa. Fisicamente assomiglia al cantante Malinconico dei Primitives e questo spiega la sua fortuna alla TV italiana. È molto snello. È figlio di padre ricchissimo ed è per questo che è "a sinistra del partito comunista cinese".

A Roma ha fondato con un gruppo di nobili una frangia politica di estrema sinistra molto "in" che si chiama «POTEVE OPEVAIO».

Negli ultimi tempi è un po' rincornato. Non ha più alcun interesse per i discorsi degli altri e non legge un libro da un anno.

È un arrivista.
